Great Damage to School

- The fire gutted the main building that housed more than a dozen classrooms and a library that served more than 1,000 students. Trace is known for its performing arts, bilingual immersion and parent involvement.
- "It's just so sad. The loss of the library books, the computers, the teachers' supplies," said parent Risa Jacobson.
- "The library had really good books and really good poems," said student Emma Perez.

Details of the Damage

- Insurance will cover the cost of rebuilding the school, but there are so many things that simply cannot be replaced.
- "Pictures of all the children I ever taught are gone," said teacher Sandra Ballingall. "I can't express it. Very, very sad."
- 16 classrooms were destroyed. A new portion of the school was not damaged thanks to the efforts of firefighters.

With 100 Drobos

- We would help the administration and faculty set up Drobos
- We could install some offsite with software that will enable offsite backup so that they'll never experience the loss of photos and video again.
- We would talk to Drobo and see if they would allow the Trace PTO to raffle off some of the Drobos to raise money to buy disk drives for the Drobos
